State Missions

Season Of Prayer September 12-15

September is state missions month in a number of states, and in Mississippi that means a season of prayer Sept. 12 to 15 and the annual Margaret Lackey Offering for State Missions with a goal this year of $275,000.

"There is no way we can over estimate the importance of this offering," said Dr. Earl Kelly, executive secretary-treasurer of the Mississippi Baptist Convention Board.

face of population growth and help is needed for churches already established that cannot meet the challenge alone, he added. A disaster relief program is desperately needed, he said.

New churches are needed in the

The week of prayer and the offering are sponsored by the Woman's Mission Union of the state. Miss Marjean Patterson is the executive secretary. She has declared that though the week of prayer is a WMU program and the Margaret Lackey Offering for State Missions is promoted by the WMU, the task will not be successful without the cooperation of the entire church.

The five areas of the offering goal include an item for $34,700 for WMU operation expenses and for work with Indians and Black Baptists.

The largest figure in the offering goal is $199,300 for new church expansion. This money is used to help local associations purchase land in the areas of population growth so that churches can be established when the needs arise.

Disaster relief in the total budget for $25,000. Church Building Aid has a goal of $11,000, and Pastoral Aid has a goal of $5,000.

Each church in the state has been sent several items to aid in information concerning the needs represented in the offering goal. These include the regular week of prayer study material and a film strip complete with a taped narration and a written script.

Season Of Prayer Makes Missions Needs Known

Mississippi Baptists will be joining hands and heads and opening pocketbooks when the State Mission Season of Prayer needs are made known to every church member in our convention during mid-September.

With abundant optimism, courage and faith in God and in Mississippi Baptists, convention leaders are projecting a worthy, challenging goal of $275,000 for the Margaret Lackey State Mission Offering. This is the greatest state mission-offering goal ever in the life of our convention.

Margaret Lackey was the executive secretary of Mississippi Woman's Missionary Union at a time in history when funds were scarce and Baptists were not as numerous as now. Yet I think she would not be surprised to know of the goal for this year's offering for this woman of great vision believed in what Mississippi Baptists could do for the Lord's work when properly challenged.

Excellent materials for use with the State Mission Season of Prayer have been produced and distributed widely throughout the state. Filmstrips, program booklets, theme posters, offering envelopes and family prayer reminders all have been furnished every congregation.

It is our hope that the State Mission filmstrip will be utilized in at least 1,000 of our churches during September. In this way, Mississippi Baptists will be able to see, as well as hear about how the State Mission Offering has benefitted individuals and congregations in our state.

I pray that every congregation affiliated with the Mississippi Baptist Convention will catch the spirit of mission advance in the Magnolia State and that every member will respond with prayer and offerings.

Record Number Meets For Preaching Week

RIDGECREST, N. C. — The Bible Preaching Conference established a record attendance for the summer season here at Ridgecrest Baptist Conference Center with a total registration of 3,075 people.

Approximately 1,000 of the guests were young people who participated in the popular Youth Horizons Conference.

Population Growth Is Church Expansion Key

By Dr. Earl Kelly
Executive Secretary-Treasurer
Mississippi Baptist Convention Board

In 1974 the Mississippi Baptist Convention Board entered "The Decade of Advance" with a goal to establish 100 new churches in fast population growth areas. Two years later 40 new churches have already come into existence.

The Mississippi Baptist Convention Board has made sizeable investments in 13 of these churches and the others have been financed by local groups. More than $350,000 has been spent since 1974 for church sites and trailers. Funds are needed to purchase land in the paths of obvious population growth.

After growth takes place inflated land prices make it difficult to find suitable sites.

Some $75,000 has already been committed for 1977. This only leaves $124,000 of the anticipated State Mission Offering for new ventures. Past experience indicates this sum will be inadequate to match the opportunities as they arise.

The Shoreline Park Baptist Chapel was started in an old barracks building secured from the navy base in Gulfport, Miss. The building was first used by the sponsoring church, Waveland Baptist Church, as their first unit. Following the completion of the permanent building here, the old barrack was moved to Shoreline Park Subdivision some two miles north of Waveland. The Gulf Coast Baptist Association has purchased six lots there with the help of the Mississippi Baptist Convention Board.

Hobbs Retires From "The Baptist Hour"

FORT WORTH (BP) — Herschel H. Hobbs, the man who through "The Baptist Hour" — has preached to more people than any other Southern Baptist pastor, has asked to be relieved of his duties on the long-running radio program heard on 394 stations in the U. S. and around the world.

His final sermon on the program, a modified worship service produced and syndicated by the Southern Baptist Radio and Television Commission, will be preached on September 26, about one month short of his 60th birthday.

Hobbs, who has preached more than 700 "Baptist Hour" sermons, described his work as "a privilege beyond description. It has also been a tremendous responsibility. And it has been a labor of love. I have neither received nor desired a salary for this assignment for my denomination and my Lord."

During the 18 years he has been recording sermons for "The Baptist Hour," the now retired pastor and former Southern Baptist Convention president has never had to postpone a recording session due to voice trouble. A heart attack more than five years

The Mississippi Baptist Convention Board has approved the organization of a disaster relief task force. This disaster relief program will be put into effect by the development of three distinct phases:

Bold Mission Thrust Gets Major Boost

By Dan Martin
RIDGECREST, N. C. (BP) — Bold Mission Thrust, the emphasis aimed at evangelizing the nation by 1980, got a major denominational boost here.

Representatives of the Southern Baptist Convention Woman's Missionary Union, Brotherhood Commission, Executive Committee, and Stewardship Commission joined the Home Mission Board in presenting the emphasis to more than 2,000 persons at Home Mission Week at Ridgecrest Baptist Conference Center.

Also participating were the editors of 19 state Baptist papers and of Baptist Press, the SBC news service.

Bold Mission Thrust, a major emphasis for the denomination's Home Mission Board, has as its twin aim evangelizing and "congregationalizing" the nation.

"This is an opportune time for Bold Mission Thrust," said Arthur B. Rutledge, HMB executive director-treasurer. "People are more open to the gospel now than they have been in decades. People are seeing we need to make a turn; that we need help beyond ourselves."

Rutledge cited the 12.7 million strong SBC.

"For the past five years, we have exceeded 400,000 baptisms each year. That is more than two million people in the past five years. People are responsive to gospel."

He added it would be "unthinkable for our evangelistic minded denomination not to structure itself for growth. One of the unique things about Southern Baptists is that we are committed to growth."

Rutledge dipped into the political arena to note the nomination of Southern Baptist Jimmy Carter. It has helped "people in areas where Southern Baptists are relatively unknown to learn something about Southern Baptists. People in all

Offering Aids Camp Ministry, Minority Work

By Marjean Patterson
Executive Secretary,

Several areas of special interest and concern to Baptist women and young people in Mississippi are made possible by the Margaret Lackey State Mission Offering.

Some outstanding leaders among National Baptist women were present at Camp Garaywa last week during the sessions of local WMU leaders training. Their transportation, room and board, and registration free were made possible by Margaret Lackey State Mission Offering.

Choctaw Indians boys and girls were provided with missions camping experiences at Garaywa this summer partially because of the Margaret Lackey State Mission Offering.

One of the needs of some of the Choctaw Baptist churches is for trained pianists to contribute to the worship services. With State Mission Offering, piano lessons are offered to any Choctaw young person or adult who is willing to discipline himself to train his musical ability. These lessons, provided at the Baptist Indian Center, have helped to develop musicians in some of the Choctaw churches.

Area leadership clinics for women in National Baptist churches provide information, training and fellowship. These are made possible

Pastoral Aid Provides Full-Time Ministry

By Ervin Brown
Director of Associational Missions
DeSoto Baptist Association
I have a deep conviction that Pastoral Aid is "Mission Money" well spent!

In our Association it has meant the difference between several of our churches having a "full-time" pastor or having a "working" pastor with limited time for this church. When a pastor who has been forced to have secular employment is able to give full time to his church work, it is a special blessing to the pastor and to the church. The pastor is able to attend the local pastors' conference, and other meetings that help him in his training and to provide a fellowship with other pastors that he could not have before. This can be a great value to him.

In several of our NEW churches, pastoral aid has meant that a well-trained and experienced man sections of our land are learning a little about us and that is not hurting. It is helping."

Gerald Palmer, head of the HMB missions section, noted: "We know the answer to the question that is being asked across our land: 'What does it mean to be born again?'"

He added: "Without apology, this is a time for direct, intense, personal evangelism."

Carolyn Weatherford, WMU executive director, commented: "At the end of 200 years, our nation is still not Christian. Southern Baptists must bear responsibility for a good part of that."

She said that if Bold Mission Thrust is to succeed, "We must have mission action. Mission action is an organized effort of a church . . . to minister and to witness. Ministry and witness are the sharp, two edges of the sword, and you can hardly have one without the other."

"If we are going to present the claims of Christ boldly to our nation, we are going to have to do more than just take the opportunities as they present themselves. We are going to have to organize ourselves to carry out this effort."

Miss Weatherford added: "The Lord did not put us here to do the best we can. He gave us the commission to go into all the world and preach the gospel."

Glendon McCullough, executive director of the Brotherhood Commission, told participants: "Our conventions and associations have not yet really dealt with lay involvement in our denomination, and one aspect that we have not dealt with is the role of women in the church and as missionaries."

"Bold Mission Thrust is not intended for denominational leaders, mission board, pastors, staff members. It is intended for every believer."

"If we are going to have a Bold Mission Thrust, we are going to help all of God's people. If we are going to have a Bold Mission Thrust, all of God's children have got to be involved."

He said he wishes "we had developed a cooperative program of human resources, but we haven't done so well in that area."

"Jesus in his ministry seemed to seek our ordinary people and help them do extraordinary things," McCullough added. "This can be the basic Bold Mission Thrust today — ordinary people doing extraordinary things."

Edgar Cooper, editor of the Florida Baptist Witness, told editors he feels "a spirit of cooperation we haven't had in several years."

But, he warned planners not to "overlook inspiration. We can get bogged down in statistics, planning, computer data and overlook inspiration."

"I think this missions thrust should have a deep spiritual current," he added.

A. C. Queen, editor of the Pennsylvania Baptist, noted he feels "We are getting a boost in what we already are doing."

"We are overwhelmed by the assignment of sharing the gospel with every person," Queen added. "We have 125 congregations and about 15,000 members (in Pennsylvania and South New Jersey). We are attempting by the assignment to take on eight million unchurched people and three or four million more in somebody's church who are not born again. We are overwhelmed by the assignment."

"But we are optimistic. We feel we are on course. We feel we are building toward the future."

New Church Chooses First Deacons

On August 8, the newly constituted Bovina Church held its first deacon election by secret ballot. The following men were elected: James Ahner, Hilton Dawson, Charles Hill and Jack Harper. The church has established the rotating system for the deacons and also will be using the "Deacon Family Ministry Plan."

On August 15 three of these men were ordained, Jack Harper being already ordained. At this special service, Dr. John McCall First Church, Vicksburg, charged the church, and Rev. David Kendall, of Trinity Church, Vicksburg, charged the deacons. Dr. Norman O'Neal, associational missionary for Warren County, delivered the ordination prayer and Rev. Guy Grey of Immanuel Church, Vicksburg gave the benediction. Other churches represented were the Long Lake, Vicksburg, and the Northwest Hills, Jackson.

A Constitution and By-laws was adopted on August 15 in the morning worship hour. The budget for 76-77 will show an increase in Cooperative Program giving of 2% and associational missions giving of 1%. "God is so good, it's just onward and upward. . . ." says Jasper Collins, pastor.

Baylor Alumni To Meet

Former students of Baylor University who live in Mississippi have formed a Mississippi Baylor Alumni Club. William E. Ballou, minister of education at Alta Woods Baptist Church in Jackson, is the president. For its next meeting the club plans to meet at the Holiday Inn Downtown in Jackson for a viewing party of the Baylor-University of Houston football game. This meeting will be Sept. 11 at 3 p.m. in the Rain-tree Room. Reservations may be made by calling Ballou at Alta Woods Church in Jackson before Sept. 8.

ago slowed him briefly but didn't really stop him. Instead of his flying to Fort Worth to record, a Radio-TV Commission engineer moved equipment to Oklahoma City to record him there.

"A denomination is fortunate to produce a man like Herschel Hobbs at least once in every generation. Dr. Hobbs comes from the school of ministers who believes in the excellence of preparation," said Paul M. Stevens, commission president, in expressing regret at Hobbs' decision to step down.

"He established himself as a pastor whose ministry was 'text-book' in its classical application and he applied himself to the life of the denomination — that is, to its growth and expansion throughout the world," Stevens said.

"He is a man who has paid his dues in all areas of the Christian ministry and, as such, he made a superb contribution through 'The Baptist Hour'."

Stevens said the Radio and Television Commission will "continue to use 'The Baptist Hour' as a great evangelical instrument in broadcasting and to select men with pastoral experience to reach the people of America and the world." He said Frank Pollard, pastor of First Baptist Church, Jackson, Miss., will preach on the program in October, November and December.

One of the letters Hobbs received was from a young woman who thanked him for saving her life.

"She had checked into a hotel room and was prepared to turn on the gas when I asked, on the radio, a hook question, wanting to know how things were going," Hobbs recalled. "I had said, 'Why don't we talk about it?' She listened to the sermon and didn't turn the gas on."

Hobbs also received numerous letters from missionaries telling him they used "The Baptist Hour" sermons to teach English. Many other missionaries, away from their own church fellowships, considered him their special pastor.

Thank You

No words adequately can express our appreciation for the many kindnesses shown us in recent days in connection with my retirement from the editorship of the Baptist Record.

To staff members, Baptist Building personnel, our fellow church members, friends far and near, and members of our family, we can only say, "thank you, and God bless you everyone!"

Baptist Missionary Dies In Argentina

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina — Martha (Mrs. Ernest C.) Pippin, Southern Baptist missionary to Argentina, died here in the British Hospital at 10:30 a. m. Aug. 20 after suffering a cerebral hemorrhage at 9:30 a.m. August 19. She was 49 years old.

Memorial services were held in Buenos Aires Aug. 23 in Spanish and Aug. 24 in English. Following the services, Pippin accompanied the body to Nashville, Tenn., where funeral services were held.

The Pippins were appointed by the Foreign Mission Board in April 1960.

In 1975 they became directors of the MK (children of missionaries) student home in Buenos Aires. Recently another missionary couple took over the responsibility of the home and the Pippins have been engaged in general evangelism.

The former Martha Smith, Mrs. Pippin was a native of Old Hickory, Tenn.

Churches Are Stewards, Too

The magnificent buildings gave evidence of expert care. The grass was trimmed, the shrubbery was clipped, and flowers were blooming.

"Mr. Tom, the owner, is away," the old caretaker, Uncle Henry, said. "His folks built this place with their own hands. When Mr. Tom lost it, his father bought it back. He set up a fund for it and asked that it never be sold."

"How do you know what to do around here?"

"The old man gave me instructions before his death," Uncle Henry replied. "Now, Mr. Tom comes every few years. He tells me what to do."

"But you keep the buildings painted and as trim as if he were coming tomorrow."

"Just as if he were coming today, Sir," Uncle Henry said.

"Mr. Tom trusts me. He calls me his steward."

A steward is one who takes care of another's property. The word "steward" means a manager of a house.

Churches practice responsible stewardship when they give through the Cooperative Program.

Preaching Must Prevail Anglican Tells Baptists

NEW ORLEANS (BP) — "The unmaking of a minister is the downgrading of preaching," an Anglican clergyman told students at New Orleans Seminary here.

"A seminary should attach the weight to the homiletics (preaching) program that homiletics deserve," said A. Lenard Griffith, assistant minister of St. Paul's Church, Toronto, Canada, during the seminary's annual Pastor's Conference.

"Catholics, who have rarely taught homiletics are gradually adding the course to their seminary curriculums because they see the need for it in their churches," said Griffith, who served at the City Temple Church, London, before coming to Canada.

"There is not a single full-time professor of homiletics in the city of Toronto and as a consequence, you never ask a Canadian professor to fill your pulpit. . . unless, of course, you want to empty the church," he added.

"The greatest disappointment I have ever had was the falling away from preaching in the United Kingdom Church. That is why I am an Anglican today. The future of churches in Canada for many people is a group of people getting together, in a home, without a leader or preacher, and interpreting the Bible. There will not be worship," Griffith continued.

"You Baptists and Methodists and Presbyterians have maintained the centrality of worship. It is the constituent event in the congregational life of the church. When the church stops worshipping, the church will die," he said.

"A seminary should attach the importance to the homiletic program it deserves. You as a seminary are taking all of these courses to gain information so that you will be able to preach better sermons."

"To you pastors I want to say that I hope, early in your ministry, you will find that your only ambition is to advance the Gospel so that you can be spared the schizophrenia of the servant of God when His will clashes against the desire of the human man within you."

"I hope that you will always seek to be used by Him and be satisfied only with His approval," continued Griffith. "We want to feel secure, but if you can ever get beyond this seeking after security, so that all you care about is the advancement of the Gospel . . . you just might achieve something. I'll tell you what it is . . . someday you will be able to lay your hands on someone's head and heal them."

Griffith, responding to the question on the world view of America said, "The world is envious of you (Americans). They would like to have what you have. People do not see the United States as a Christian nation," he observed. "A London editor wrote that 'Americans all go to church. . . but that doesn't mean a thing'."

Dillard has held his present position at the seminary since 1972. He has been on the Baptist seminary staff since 1963.

Swor At Glorieta

Sixty-Nine Years Young

GLORIETA, N. M. — "I enjoy being with college students more than any other age group. People my age have arthritis and grandchildren, and I'm afflicted with neither," equipped Chester E. Swor, writer-lecturer from Jackson, Miss.

This remark, directed to collegians attending the recent Student Conference at Glorieta Baptist Conference Center, is representative of the 69-year-old humor, acceptance and love for young people that have given him a special ministry.

His weeklong engagement at Glorieta was the 21st this year, contributing to an average annual travel total of 30,000 miles. His schedule this year included 17 successive weeks of speaking to college and high school audiences at retreats, Baptist Student Unions, churches and summer conferences. His primary purpose is to share ways to strengthen Christian commitment.

"My main goal since 1943, when I quit teaching to take up lecturing full time, has been to communicate the Christian calling to commitment. I try as best I can to relate the Bible to individual needs, even when issues are delicate or controversial."

Removed some 47 years from college campus, Swor speaks uniquely to the needs of young people. The best explanation for this ability to relate to generations of youth lies in an accepting, non-judgmental attitude.

"I have always tried to keep close to students, to listen and to understand," Swor said. "This has not always been easy, especially in the 60s when I didn't approve of some activities. Even when I couldn't approve, I have tried to understand."

"Young people respond to acceptance," he continued. "I believe they have a kind of inner radar which alerts them to acceptance or criticism in a person, and they respond accordingly.

"Humor sometimes opens doors," Swor added. "If members of the audience laugh, they are less likely to resent what you have to say."

Swor's interest in young people began long ago. His main love, even in college, was counseling. As professor of English, dean of men and director of student activities at Mississippi College, Swor combined counseling with teaching for 14 years. In 1943 he put aside teaching to lecture and has not regretted the decision.

"As long as I sense that I'm making my best contribution now, I'll continue in this avenue."

In relating a situation in which he substituted for a popular athlete at a conference, Swor expressed a sentiment which explains much of his appeal.

"If you have a chance to hear the young athlete later," he told the youth, "be sure to do so. He can add a lot to your life. In our attempts to illustrate God's Word and to learn of life, he can tell you the beginning of the story."

"But," Swor added, "I can tell you both the beginning and the end of my story, a lifelong attempt to merge my life with God."

Swor's goal is to share his life with God.

Swor's goal is to share his life with God.

leans area and the side effects did considerable damage to the little building. The association set aside money to remodel the building, adding class rooms, rest rooms, and a kitchen. Things went well for almost three years. The first pastor to live on the field was there. The future looked bright.

Then tragedy struck. Hurricane Camille hit on Sunday night, August 17, 1969, leaving the building a total loss. The building was blown or washed 25 feet from its foundation and the muddy waters poured in the gaping holes where the doors and windows had been. A muddy slime was deposited all over everything. The members were busy trying to salvage what little they could of their own homes and possessions. It looked like the end of the mission.

Baptists from all over the convention began to respond to the needs of these people. The first gift came from the intermediate Sunday School class from a Black church in Louisiana. The money was sent by a truck driver and tied up in a sock. The gift amounted to $3.62. Contributions of all sizes from many sources poured in, including $3,000 from a group of pastors in Georgia.

The first real boost came with a check for $12,000 from the Mississippi Baptist Convention Board for disaster relief. This really gave the people heart. Lumber, building materials and labor were donated. The building was complet-

Kelly Speaks At Dedication Of Carey's New Gulf Coast Campus

The faith placed in its denominational schools by churches of the Mississippi Baptist Convention was noted by Dr. Earl Kelly, executive secretary-treasurer of the Mississippi Baptist Convention Board, as he delivered the dedicatory address Aug. 28 during the dedication of the new Gulf Coast campus of William Carey College.

Dr. Kelly pointed out that of the more than $11 million to be spent on Baptist colleges in Mississippi this year, $1.8 million will come from mission funds at the direction of the Mississippi Baptist Convention.

"This is a testimony of the faith of Mississippi Baptists in their Baptist colleges," he declared.

Those attending the dedication ceremonies on the front lawn of the new campus were serenaded by the 502nd Air Force Band from Keesler Air Force Base at Biloxi while a gentle breeze blew in from the Gulf of Mexico just across the highway.

Dr. J. Ralph Noonkester, president of William Carey College, was the master of ceremonies for the occasion. He introduced James C. Goodwin, president of Metropolitan National Bank, Biloxi, and a Carey alumnus, and Dr. Frank Gunn, pastor of First Church, Biloxi, and Rev. Bobby Perry, pastor of First Baptist Church of Moss Point, for antiphonal scripture reading. Both are Carey trustees.

He also introduced Dr. William P. Osborn, administrative dean for William Carey College on the Coast, who said that the coast campus of the college could bring to people on the coast an individualization of education, could be a family oriented college, and could strengthen the work of Baptists on the coast. He said there has not been a time when the need to preach the gospel of Jesus Christ has been greater, and he proclaimed the coast campus "the most beautiful Baptist college campus in Mississippi."

Dr. Kelly detailed three objectives that a denomination has a right to expect from its institutions of higher learning. They were scriptural perspective in life, spiritual purpose in life, and significant preparation for life.

"In Christian higher education, the Scriptures are the foundation on which Christian education is built, the backdrop against which all other subjects are viewed, the framework within which all else is to be interpreted, and the core around which all other subjects are to be integrated. Curriculum is neither Christian or unchristian, but the Bible can be made to permeate and penetrate one's approach and interpretation of the truths in all fields of study.

"It is this premise that leads the denomination to require Christian professors. Only a committed Christian can see the whole meaning of human existence and destiny in terms of Christian revelation. A Christian's innermost self will break through the subject matter he is teaching.

"Christian education is the impartation of a point of view that puts Christ at the vital center of all knowledge and life. It is indoctrination. All education — not just Christian education — is indoctrination. Your denomination is making a deliberate attempt to cultivate the conviction that it is not only proper and legitimate but also vitally necessary to see all things from the vantage point of the cross.

"Education is education only when it creates a sense of values, when it takes a stand, argues for commitment, zealously proclaims a position. It is absurd to allow competing philosophies of life to gallop freely and suppose the best will win."

"At the very point in time when numerous pressure groups are being sustained by the courts in their drive to extract all distinctive Christian emphasis from public gatherings on college campuses, Christian institutions of higher learning need to emphasize the need of genuine worship. The Chapel should be at the heart of the campus. Chapel programs should provide the best Christian emphasis on the entire campus."

"A person should not underestimate the important influence of persons with whom he associates. A person is marked for life by the college he attends. Professors exert a tremendous influence on their students, but it is equally true that students influence the lives of their students."

"Baptists support Christian higher education out of mission funds only because they believe they must prepare young people to be responsible churchmen who possess a sense of vocational missions. I can assure you that our concern goes deeper than faculty, funds, and facilities. Our chief concern is Christian service in church and community. We want to believe that the Christian college is preparing people who are equipped to minister to a pagan society that has its values inverted. Our culture is more concerned about air pollution than about moral pollution. It is more 'uptight' about the ecological problems of the 'garbage boom' than it is about the filth of pornography. Our society opposes cancer of the lungs but gives very little attention to the cancer of the soul.

"There is an acute shortage of dedicated and educated Christians who know the Word of God and can relate it to the world's needs today. We need more well-trained pastors, directors of Christian education and music, Christian journalists, missionaries, teachers in grade schools, high schools, and colleges. We need Christian leaders in business, government, and industry. Most of all we need educated Christian parents."

The coast campus will use buildings that were formerly a military academy. It has classrooms and library space already available as well as a kitchen and dining area. A portion of the main building has been remodeled for use as offices.

The library has 2,000 volumes on hand and a complete card index of the 90,000-volume library on the main campus in Hattiesburg. A van will make the trip each day to transport books that coast campus students check out.

Bobbie Wood, the reigning Miss Mississippi, is a William Carey student and was present for the dedication. She was introduced by Greg Bullock, president of the Carey Student Government Association.

Church Training Emphasis To Highlight Children

GLORIETA, N. M. — Church training leaders have chosen children as the age-group emphasis for 1976-77.

According to William E. Young, supervisor of the children's section of the Southern Baptist Sunday School Board's church training department, "this emphasis will call attention to the benefits of church training for children, such as the understanding of Baptists beliefs, everyday Christian living and the work of the church."

"Often if a child doesn't get these basics in church training," Young continued, "he may very well never get them at all."

The year-long theme "Every Child Exploring Discipleship" will be emphasized through special projects, periodical support and field service promotion.

Recommended projects for the upcoming church year include

Launch Sunday on Oct. 31, when the importance of training for children is emphasized initially; youth apprenticeships, in which youth are entitled to work with children in church training; neighborhood children's clubs; parents' night; a training blitz for leaders; and children's recognition night.

Young expressed hope that churches would take the opportunity to use "Exploring Baptist Beliefs," the children's book designated for Baptist Doctrine Week, April 3-5.

Regional child life conference will be held in 1977 to provide in-depth training for workers with children. One is scheduled April 11-13 at Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary, Fort Worth; the second will be held at Ridgecrest (N.C.) Baptist Conference Center, April 23-29.

was able to be called as their first pastor, rather than a man who had given much of this time to making a living for his family.

Also, many of our OLDER churches, which all their lives were able only to provide for a "working pastor," have now, because of the growth trend in our Association, begun to feel the real need to have a pastor who can give more time to his church. But...

It is "big jump" in the salary scale to go from the working pastor's salary... usually about $300 a month... to any kind of a full time pastor's salary. This is where Pastoral Aid makes a great contribution. This little church with a new vision and a desire to grow and to reach its growing community, with Pastoral Aid can make a beginning toward a full time program.

This is a step of faith on the part of the church, which now assumes a sacred responsibility to provide for its full time pastor... and so often on the part of the pastor, a step of faith to leave the security of a good job and usually a drastic cut in family income. (Several of our "full time" men are receiving only about $350-$400 a month income, but they feel it worth while to begin this growth... and Pastoral Aid makes the difference.)

Pastoral Aid helps these churches go through this "bend," and gives them time to get on their feet. The end results are a growing church, reaching more people for our Lord. Without Pastoral Aid many of these churches would not even try this new step. We pray it can be more in the future.

EDITORIAL

Full Speed And On Course

Allow a personal note, please, in this first statement as editor of the Baptist Record. Initially, I must say that I know of no other place on earth where I would rather be seeking to serve the Lord than right here. I realize those are words heard before many times in many places. I must insist that for me they are true.

The warmth of friendship that I have found in Mississippi has been most heartening. The spirit to be found in the state is inspiring.

The Baptist Record has achieved a high level of acceptance both inside the state and beyond. I pray this will continue to be the case. Certainly, we will bend every effort in that direction.

When I was in high school, I participated in different areas of athletics, but track was my favorite. Among the several track events that I entered, the 440-yard relay was favored. I suppose that was because one can see a pattern of life unfold in 45 seconds or less.

There were many thrills to the 440-yard relay. Many times it was my lot to be the first runner, with the job of having my team ahead at the first baton pass.

Other times I was named the anchor man and assigned the task of getting our baton across the finish line first. It was a great thrill to know that our team was off to a good start and we were leading after the first 110 yards. It was a thrill to cross the finish line first, carrying the hopes of three other fine runners.

But it seems the greatest thrill of all was waiting as anchor man and looking back down the track to see our number three runner coming around the curve ahead of the field.

I attended a small high school, and when I was a senior we were the state champions in the 440-yard relay in our class. We won that event "going away," as they say in track circles. Our lead was increasing with every stride. I know, because I had been the starting runner in that particular race and was watching the conclusion of it with more than idle curiosity.

In a relay race the runner getting ready to take the baton from the one before him does not wait around until he feels he is ready to run before taking off. He has his eyes on the track ahead and is moving at almost full speed, waiting only for the feel of the baton in his back - stretched hand before he closes his hand around the baton and "turns on the steam."

Yes, a relay race is much akin to life. The baton, or the torch, as it may be, passes from hand to hand as each participant accepts it at his own starting point and brings it around to the best of his ability to the next one to handle in the best way that he can.

All of which brings me to the point of trying to pay tribute to the one who has just completed his portion of the Baptist Record relay. To say that he ran a good race is too much of an understatement. He was outstanding. A visit with Baptists around the state bears out this fact. The love for this man and the high esteem in which he is held are testimonies to his greatness.

He is a man of exceptional ability; and if there is one who knows him who doesn't call him friend, he would be hard to find.

It has been a great privilege to spend these two years in the office of the Baptist Record and in the Baptist Building. I am pleased to be a member of the team that is on the field at the present time and pray my endeavors will make a worthwhile contribution. I appreciate greatly the opportunity afforded me by Dr. Odle and Dr. Kelly leading both to the selection as associate editor and to the election as editor.

It has been a thrill to be here and know the Baptist Record is moving around the curve full-speed, on course, and looking great.

You've done a tremendous job, Joe Odle. You've handed us the baton with our team in excellent condition. We who are now accepting the baton, all of us who will be engaged in taking it on down the way for our stated periods, pledge to you and to all Mississippi Baptists our very best to see that it moves along in good style and with dignity and courage.

We pledge to "turn on the steam" in an all-out effort.

Our starting runner, J. B. Gambrell, got us away from the blocks in a fine way. All through almost 100 years the eight editors have carried the baton very well indeed. But we are not beginning the final lap, and we at the Baptist Record now must make our contributions so that the next editor and the next staff group won't have to start out behind. With God's help, we will.

The Baptist Record has a fine

State Missions Challenge

In Mississippi, State Missions offers as many exciting concepts as do foreign missions and home missions. Indeed, in some instances in Mississippi state missions work is carried on right along side that of the Home Mission Board, and some of the Home Mission Board work is with foreign nationals who have made their way to our shores by ship.

The Season of Prayer for State Missions is Sept. 12 to 15 this year. The Margaret Lackey Offering for State Missions is a companion effort which cannot be over-rated in its importance.

Though Mississippi probably has as many, and maybe even more, church members per capita as any other state, the lost here are just as lost as are those in Asia or anywhere else. The task of winning them is delegated to the local church for the most part, and a great part of the task of the state missions offering is in strengthening the local churches which need help and in establishing new ones where they are needed.

The state missions offering goals this year are divided into five areas. Three of them are directly involved with local church situations. The largest of the goals is the one for new church expansion. This figure is $199,300. A sizeable population increase is expected in Mississippi within the next few years. The new church expansion fund is already buying new church sites in the paths of population growth so that there can be churches ready to minister to the newcomers when they arrive.

Churches which have suffered disasters in building losses can expect to find help through the state missions offering because of an $11,000 item in this year's goal.

And churches which need full-time pastors immediately and cannot pay full-time salaries will be aided by a $5,000 item.

An effort to establish immediate disaster relief will call for a $25,000 portion of the offering. And WMU operations expenses at Camp Garaywa and work with Indians and black Baptists have a total goal of $34,700.

This rounds out the entire goal for the offering at $275,000.

The Woman's Missionary Union is promoting the effort to reach the goal, but the entire church needs to be a part of it. A great deal of material is in the hands of each church and should help the congregation understand the needs and help each church prepare to be a part of reaching the goal.

Among the materials sent out to support the effort are a mission study program and a film strip complete with taped narration and written script designed to explain the areas of the offering.

This issue of the Baptist Record is dedicated to aiding the state missions cause, and special articles have been written by five persons relative to the five areas of the offering.

Those who wrote have had firsthand experience with the needs mentioned and with the help that can be afforded. It is hoped that each subscriber will take time to obtain the information that is available and then act on it.

It is a challenging goal, to be sure. But it represents less than 60 cents for each resident Mississippi Baptist.

Letters Of Appreciation Received For Ministry

Mississippi Baptists have been blessed for two generations by the ministry of Joe Odle. He has played many roles on the stage of life and deserves an academy award for each of them. Whether the role has been pastor, teacher, associate executive secretary, editor, or friend, Joe Odle has been a consistent example of what a Christian ought to be. He has exerted a positive unconscious influence on all of us who have been privileged to know him and work with him. One of the high points of my ministry has been the opportunity to work beside him during the past three years. My prayer is that the Lord will keep Joe and Mabel around for a long time. We need more people like them.

Earl Kelly

Dr. Joe Odle is a rare combination: a deeply spiritual man of God and a competent, sensitive newsman. Because of this unusual welding of gifts, this man has made a lasting and measureless contribution to Mississippi Baptists and to the work of the Lord. We are forever in his debt.

I feel that I can speak for Mississippi Baptists as we all wish for him and Mrs. Odle many happy and productive years as they continue to serve our Lord.

James Richardson

Dear Dr. Odle,

The position of editor of The Mississippi Baptist Record is one of the most important functions of the Mississippi Baptist Convention Board. Evidence of this is the fact that the Baptist Record is the most eagerly anticipated and widely read news publication in the state. It provides stability in times of turmoil, inspiration in times of need, and information so essential to growth and development. Under your direction as editor, The Baptist Record has done all of these and more!

On behalf of the Mississippi Baptist Convention Board, let me express sincere appreciation to you for many years of dedicated and fruitful service as editor of The Baptist Record. All of us are keenly aware of your splendid record and deeply grateful to you for what you have done through the years. Your stable leadership will long be remembered by Mississippi Baptists.

May your retirement years be filled with rich memories of past successes and achievements, happy with many more opportunities of service, and productive for the one cause for which you dedicated yourself many years ago.

You will be missed - but not forgotten.

Gene A. Triggs, President
Mississippi Baptist Convention Board

God does not give to many individuals more than one talent. To Joe Odle He gave many. For more than a generation Dr. Odle has served his Lord and Mississippi Baptists in many ways. He has been a devoted pastor; a strong and Bible centered preacher; a widely read author, a denominational administrator, a distinguished editor expressing strong and uncompromising principles; a participant in many evangelistic and missionary campaigns, a thought-provoking Bible teacher, a world traveler; a constant friend of preachers; and, including all these, a lovable Christian gentleman. Dr. Odle may be retiring from the editorship of the Baptist Record, but in the years ahead his influence and ministries will be great assets to Kingdom growth. God's blessings on you, "good and faithful servant" W. Douglas Hudgins

To our choice friend, Joe Odle,
How much we want to say:

Thank you for what your ministry has meant to us.

Thank you for caring enough to do your very best, for him.

Thank you for fulfilling faithfully your high calling to share Christ and the teachings of the Word of God through spoken and written channels.

How much we want to pray:

Thanking Him for using you.

Asking Him to bless you and your dear Mabel With many more years of effective service.

On behalf of your fellow church members,
Frank Pollard

Dear Brother McGregor:

The name of Joe Odle has long been associated in Southern Baptist life with fidelity to the Word of God, devotion to the missionary outreach through the Southern Baptist Convention, commitment to the mission of each individual church, and sensitivity to the hurts and hearts of those who need Jesus as Saviors and Lord.

When you add all of these qualities to editorial excellence and journalistic skill, you have a combination which has not only meant much in the life of Mississippi Baptists, but also to the entire work of Southern Baptists at home and around the world. Mrs. Odle has been a help in all of his activities and has made a significant contribution in her own right. We thank God for the friendship and work of this wonderful team through the years.

We pray God's richest blessings on both of them and their every interest in the months and years ahead.

Sincerely yours,
Porter Routh
Executive Secretary-Treasurer,
SBC Executive Committee

Dear Dr. Odle:

Before my mind's eye in panoramic view often is seen a man with many marvelous qualities. This man for many years has produced weekly editorials for an audience in excess of one hundred thousand. The thinking and action of this great audience has been lifted, corrected, directed, and blessed. I am only one of that audience, but I am a better man as a result of the long, regular reading of that which God has said to me through you.

Far beyond the printed page, my life has been blessed by the multiple periods of delightful fellowship. I have never heard one word spoken by you, nor seen one act which was not in total harmony with my concepts of a genuine Christian gentleman. Your clean life, consistent behavior pattern, and deep convictions will live vividly in my memory and inspire me for nobler living.

Only eternity can fully reveal the tremendous impact your life and ministry have had upon Mississippi Baptists. I thank you not only for being God's man blessing many, but for being my friend.

Surely your future will be filled with major accomplishments for our Lord. I shall pray that through you many more victories will be won and laid as trophies at His feet.

Thankfully your friend,
Carey E. Cox

The Record speaks for itself concerning the ministry of Dr. Joe Odle. Having preached to more Mississippians than most any other Baptist preacher via his editorials, Dr. Odle has maintained a sensitivity to the needs of Mississippi Baptists, both through the Baptist Record and through his contacts with the various church congregations. His knowledge of and love for the Bible is deeply appreciated by all of us. His understanding of Baptist polity is far above the average. His paramount concern for the local church has called each of us to attention.

A Christian gentleman, Dr. Odle has sought to promote and strengthen all phases of Mississippi Baptist life with cordiality, conviction, and cooperation. Even the smallest unit of our Baptist life has received a kind response from Dr. Odle.

Mississippi Baptists are a better people because this man of God has labored in our midst. Our response can be only one of deep gratitude for God's blessings through his servant.

Harold Kitchings
(Dr. Kitchings is immediate past president of the Convention Board and president-elect of the Mississippi Baptist Foundation.)

Dr. Joe T. Odle has been a friend of the Christian Action Commission since its inception. He has often written strong editorials on moral issues. No one can doubt where he stands. His moral convictions are biblically based and true to our Baptist distinctives. With careful consideration he has fairly presented our positions and policies through the Baptist Record. The work of our agency has moved forward more significantly because of his support.

On the personal side, he respects differences and demonstrates compassionate concern. It is a privilege to count him a good and gracious friend.

J. Clark Hensley

Having the privilege of knowing you, working along side of you, borrowing books, asking your advice, and sometime kidding each other, Joe, has been one of the richest experiences of my life.

Appreciatively—
Art Nelson

Dear Joe,

During the time that you have served as editor of the Baptist Record I have had the privilege of reading your editorials with a great deal of interest, as well as having had the opportunity of discussing doctrinal and denominational topics at length with you. Now these experiences in my life shall always stand out as valuable ones.

I would just like to say that your attitude toward publicizing departmental emphases and dispensing promotional information has been great all the while. I would just like to take this opportunity to say "thank you" for the many courtesies you have shown the Brotherhood Department during the time you have served as editor of the Baptist Record.

Sincerely,
Elmer Howell

Dear Joe

All of us here in the Sunday School Department join in expressing our sincere and best wishes to you as the time of retirement becomes a reality.

You have supported the Bible teaching and reaching emphases in so many fine ways, both in the printed page of the Baptist Record and your personal, spoken contributions.

You have been recognized in the past as a strong Sunday School pastor and I am positive that your entire ministry will reflect this feeling to all who have known you during these years.

May God bless you and Mrs. Odle in the days ahead.
Bryant Cummings

Dear Dr. Odle,

Through my years in Mississippi I have known you as pastor, associate executive secretary, editor, and friend. It is appropriate upon your retirement as editor of The Baptist Record to express to you my personal appreciation for your work in this capacity. And this I do.

I appreciate the general leadership you have given to making our state paper one that is respected among your peers and one that has spoken to the needs of our churches. It has, in fact, been the voice of the Mississippi Baptist Convention. Too numerous to recall have been instances when I have needed space for programs, projects, and promotion for the Church Training Department and have always found you sympathetic and cooperative.

Yours has been a job well done. For that we are all grateful.
Kermit S. King

I count it all joy, dearly beloved Joe, as I think of you today. Your life has been a source of inspiration and blessing to me through the long years of our friendship in Him.

"WORD" is indeed the focal center of my gratitude for you. You have continually and faithfully held up the Name of Him Who is the Living Word. With Spirit-given insight and power, you have "rightly divided" the Inspired and Holy Written Word. All of us, the Baptists of Mississippi and the SBC, are the beneficiaries of your gift from the Lord in writing and presenting the printed word.

It is with happy anticipation that I look forward, in the days to come, to fellowship in the continuing ministry of our blessed Lord as He unfolds His richest blessings upon you.

Gratefully, to Him and to you,
Roy Colium

I have greatly appreciated the cooperative spirit of Joe Odle as editor of the BAPTIST RECORD. Not only has he done his best to provide good space for news and publicity from our office (Continued on page 5)

When The Relationship Must Be Broken

By Clifton Perkins
Director, Department of Church -
Minister Relations
(Third In A Series)

One of my favorite stories is about a little boy who volunteered to take part in a civilian defense drill back in the warring days of World War II. It was a simulated air raid, and the boy was told that he had been hit and cut by flying glass and that he was to lie under a tree until the first aid team came to take care of him. Those were the days when civilian defense was not very efficient, so several hours passed before anyone showed up to minister to the little fellow.

When the team finally did reach the tree, they found no one there. Instead they noticed a note sticking to the bark of the tree. It said, simply but conclusively, "Have bled to death and gone home."

Yes, in life some relationships just don't work out. Somebody "bleeds to death and goes home," so to speak. That is also true of the pastor and people relationship. Sometimes it doesn't work out.

Pastors often speak of the first few months on the new church field as the "honeymoon." There is the round of dinner invitations into various homes of the membership, and the joy of meeting new people. The church responds to the new pastor's leadership and he enthusiastically says, "I felt the call of God to come here." The people express the same sentiment.

Too many times this beautiful relationship changes. The lovely glow of warmth turns into the white heat of frustration, dissatisfaction, and maybe even bitterness. When this condition prevails, every effort should be made by pastor and church leaders to work out the difficulties in a spirit of prayer and good will.

If such efforts fail, consideration should be given to break the relationship because of honest differences between pastor and people. When this time arrives, utmost care must be taken to preserve the integrity of both the church and the minister.

Let it be stated plainly that a campaign to get rid of the pastor should not take place. Such campaigns magnify the problem — they might even tempt us to use unchristian tactics. Conflict appeals to our lower motives. The object becomes winning the struggle and not concern for the Kingdom of God and for each other.

In a Baptist church the majority rules, but it should never be a ruthless and unfeeling majority. Also, there should not be a "minority rule" because of a silent or indifferent majority. Once a pastor was informed by the chairman of deacons that a decision had been made in a secret deacon's meeting to ask for his resignation. Naturally, the pastor was shocked that he should be tried in his absence.

Why would we be less fair in a church than we are required to be in a court of law. "But we have a problem with our pastor," someone says. So what? As Sam Granade says, "Does the solution to a problem call for secrecy, deception, and unchristian attitudes? If so, we need to ask, 'What difference does Christianity make?'"

When the relationship between pastor and people becomes strained to the point of breaking, the pastor should consider carefully the effectiveness of his witness and work. If he sees that he can no longer minister effectively because of irreconcilable differences, he should be honest enough and courageous enough to inform church leaders that he plans to leave as soon as he can find another place of service.

The church should certainly be willing to allow a pastor a reasonable time to secure another position. This is often a slow process among Baptists. Patience should be exercised. It should be kept in mind that we belong to a church group that frowns on a pastor applying for another pastoral position.

The church must avoid if at all possible an open confrontation in which they seek to dismiss the pastor. When open confrontation occurs, the church is often divided and its fellowship is dangerously weakened. Generations may pass before such differences are forgotten.

If the matter cannot be worked out in a Christian manner without taking it before a church business session, great care should be exercised. All parties should avoid cheap and underhand methods. A business meeting involving such important issues should be held only after proper notice has been given to all church members as to the time, place, and purpose of the meeting.

In the crisis of irreconcilable conflict, great responsibility rests upon pastor and people. Prayer and mutual concern should permeate all actions. Christ must be honored. Next week — "Preventive Measures."

called 'Country Crossroads' and you wouldn't believe what listening to that man on that show has done for our family.

"I don't know whether you can understand this or not, Mister," she went on, "but my husband was really a wicked man. And our four children weren't Christians. Now, thanks to Jerry Clower and 'Country Crossroads,' all that has changed."

"You see, we like country music and we started listening to 'Country Crossroads' every Sunday afternoon at our house. It was about the only thing the entire family (two sons and two daughters) did together."

"Every Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock my oldest daughter would bring her two little children over and we'd all tune in KBHS here and listen to that show. Nobody would say a word during the entire time. And if the telephone rang, we just didn't answer it."

"I can't say for sure when it all happened, but my husband heard what 'Country Crossroads' hosts Jerry Clower, Bill Mack and Leroy Van Dyke were saying about Christianity enough that he thought there might be something to that Christianity. So we went to church . . . (Social Hill Baptist Church, near Royal, Ark., where the family lives), and he became a Christian.

"What's more, all four of our children went to church and became Christians and were baptized. I'd been a Christian since I was a little girl but I'd drifted away. Now we're all in church. You wouldn't believe how that's changed our family, and I give God and 'Country Crossroads' all the credit."

Mrs. Hurst, contacted later, had a further report. "Well, when that man finally got it through to me that he really was Jerry Clower, and that the fellow with him was Jim Rupe, the producer of the show, I was really excited!"

"I got Jerry's autograph and I can't tell you what a blessing it was, just meeting and talking to him. But listen, best of all, since I talked to Jerry my daughter's husband, his mother and daddy, a brother who was bad to drink and a sister-in-law of his have all become Christians and been baptized and are in church — all because of what 'Country Crossroads' did."

For Once Jerry Clower Had Trouble Finding The Words

By Bonita Sparrow

FORT WORTH (BP) — Anybody going to try to out talk Mississippi funnyman Jerry Clower had better bring his lunch and plan to spend the day. After all, Clower makes his living with his mouth.

But an Arkansas woman determined to talk about "Country Crossroads" recently told a story that left the Grand Ole Opry comedian nearly speechless and brought tears to his eyes.

"Country Crossroads" is the

'COUNTRY CROSSROADS' TEAM — Comic Jerry Clower, a regular guest on "Country Crossroads," produced and syndicated by the Southern Baptist Radio and Television Commission, gets into an airplane with his favorite pilot, Jim Rupe (right). half-hour radio program produced by Baptists through their Southern Baptist Radio and Television Commission and broadcast on 504 stations in this country. Clower, a Baptist, is a co-host on the program.

"I've driven a limousine for Don Bridges Limousine service in Don Bridges Limousine service in Hot Springs, Ark., about four years so I didn't think too much about it when the dispatcher sent me to the airport to pick up a couple of men going to town," said Buelah (Mrs. Leroy) Hurst. "It's about a three-mile trip and that's a pretty good fare."

She had no idea the man in the bright yellow suit was Clower, on his way to address a gathering of the Arkansas Poultry Federation. Nor did she know the man with him was Jim Rupe, who produces "Country Crossroads" for the Fort Worth-based Baptist agency.

Mrs. Hurst opened the conversation. "If I didn't know better, I'd swear you look for the world like Jerry Clower," she told the comedian. "In fact, you look so much like him you could be his twin brother."

Taking Clower's startled reaction for offense she immediately apologized. "I didn't mean to offend you, but you really shouldn't be upset. I'm paying you a real compliment."

She explained. "Jerry Clower is on a radio show that's heard every Sunday afternoon in this area. It's

Cobra Bite Leads Asian To Hospital And Christ

By Dr. Rebekah A. Naylor
BANGALORE, India — Putappa was engaged in an activity not new to him — catching a deadly cobra. His intention was to seize the animal and stitch its mouth closed. Instead, he was bitten.

Putappa's home is in a village regularly visited by the community health division of Bangalore Baptist Hospital. His fellow villagers immediately began to try to find some means to transport Putappa to the hospital. Two hours after the bite, Putappa was carried into the hospital, irrational from lack of oxygen. Only minutes after arrival he stopped breathing, all muscles had been paralyzed by the venom.

The doctors and nurses provided mechanical respiration and essential antivenin. Additional supplies of antivenin were donated by other hospitals in the city. For almost five hours the man lay unconscious in the hospital's intensive care unit.

Putappa finally began to recover, regaining consciousness and beginning to breathe on his own. That same night he was told that it was in the name of Jesus his life had been saved.

In the days that followed Putappa required repeated operations on his hand due to the infection from the bite. While in the hospital, Putappa learned that Jesus had given His life so that he might have eternal life.

Already Putappa is sharing this news with others. Worship of the cobra will no longer have significance for him.

Dr. Rebekah A. Naylor is a Southern Baptist missionary physician in Bangalore, India.

Dr. Odle, your retirement provides a wonderful opportunity for me to join a great host of your friends in expressing sincere appreciation to you for the significant contribution to Baptist life during your years as editor of the Baptist Record.

You have been firm in your convictions ings on you and Mrs. Odle as you enter a new era of life.

Your Friend,
Chester Vaughn

Dr. Odle, how thankful I am to God that six and one-half years ago He impressed upon you to select me as one of your associates. I truly count it a blessing to have had the opportunity of working, for and along side of you during this period of time. I shall never forget the very first Southern Baptist Convention we attended together and how many people from across our Convention would come by to congratulate you upon your editorials or your books or mention to you that they had heard you teach a Bible study in their church somewhere. Then, be able to emulate some of these things in my own life.

Perhaps in your years of retirement we can enjoy even more this "sweet spirit" of your friendship. Words cannot adequately express my heart feeling, so let me simply say to you — "Thank you for being my boss, pastor, friend and counselor." I know God will continue to bless you and use you, perhaps even more and in a greater way for His Kingdom in these years of retirement. At least this is our prayer for you.

Heirs Of God's Grace

By Wm. J. Fallis
Romans 4:1-25;
Galatians 3:19 to 4:7

Did you notice that the Bible lesson for last Sunday did not mention the word "reconciliation" — although that is the theme for this quarter? You won't find it in the Bible passage for this lesson either. We are sort of building up to it. The word used most often so far is "justify." It is one of Paul's ways of describing salvation; which was such a great idea for him that one word could not say it all. Some have said that the word means to declare a person righteous, but others argue that it can also mean to make righteous. The justified person is not only forgiven of past sin but is given an uprightness that can affect all his relationships. This is a key word for these first two lessons.

The Lesson Explained
Abraham, Father Of The Faithful (Romans 4)
This chapter in Romans is essential for understanding Paul's references in Galatians to Abraham. Gentiles needed to know the patriarch, and both Gentiles and Jews needed Paul's interpretation of "the faith of Abraham; who is the father of us all" (v. 16). He was the most prominent figure in Jewish history, but he did not depend on the law for him justification. In verse 3 Paul quoted Genesis 15:6 to show Abraham's relation to God: "Abraham believed God, and it was counted unto him for righteousness." As the great ancestor was justified by faith, so were his children to be saved by faith — not by striving to obey the law. Abraham trusted God long before the law was given. So, true faith proceeded mere obedience.

Beyond The Law As Custodian
(Gal. 3:23-29)

If faith is so important, of what value was the law? In the Bible passage of this lesson Paul answers that question with two analogies. In verse 24 he describes the law as "our custodian," which is a better translation than schoolmaster. The Greek word describes a person responsible for protecting and exercising discipline over a growing child. The law fulfilled a good purpose for a time, but it could not make a person right before God.

After Jesus ("the faith") come, however, men were set right by believing in him, thus becoming children of God. Baptism "into Christ" identified them with him as though they were clothed by him. But it also brought them into a fellowship greater than the difference which have always divided mankind. Oneness in Christ must supersede discriminations based on nationality, sex, and social standing. Verse 29 reads in TEV: "If you belong to Christ, then you are the descendants of Abraham, and will receive what God has promised."

Into The Time of Inheritance
(Gal. 4:1-7)

Paul's second analogy for the law appears in verses 1-2. He pictures a boy who will eventually inherit family property. Before he reaches the time set by his father to receive the inheritance, he is a child and is treated as one by "tutors and governors." During his strict training, he seems no better off than a slave. People under law had a similar experience. That seems to be the direction of Paul's thought, but in verse 3 he says they were "in bondage under the elements of the world." The word for "elements" can be interpreted at least two ways: elementary forms of religion or elemental spirits. In either case, it pointed to a time when both Jew and Gentile had not reached maturity.

"But when the time had fully come" (RSV), God acted to provide the inheritance. His Son came into the world by human birth, and as a Jew was subject to the law. By his death he liberated (redeemed) those under the law. That was God's first purpose in sending him. The second was so "that we might attain the status of sons" (NEB). Because the sonship is real, God has given the Spirit of his Son to believers to acknowledge God as Father. The Aramaic "Abba" was the affectionate word of a boy for his father. Led by the Spirit, Gentile Christians had come into their full inheritance as sons and heirs of grace, along with Jewish believers.

A Woman's World Reaches For Beyond the Ironing Board

When our boys were small we had all kinds of illnesses — three cases at a time of every childhood disease, several serious illnesses and accidents. Then we had a long stretch of years when they were all so healthy we could not believe it; however, the last couple of years we have had one illness or accident after another. The latest (if we hurry to press!) was Frank's tonsillectomy. He's twenty, so it wasn't too easy for him.

On that first day — after surgery, but before I had sense enough to ask for something for the pain stronger than the plain Tylenol he was being given — I kept drizzling water and melting ice down his throat. Words and grunts didn't feel good getting from his brain to my ears, so he'd wiggle or squirm to let me know he wanted a sip of liquid. After a brief time of difficulty in being attentive enough, I began to watch him constantly. When he opened his eyes, I'd place the liquid to his mouth. Soon I asked him, "Is that, opening your eyes, going to be our signal, that you want something cold to drink?" He nodded, "Yes."

So I sat there, waiting for those eyes to open and look up at me, and you know the scripture that kept coming to my heart, don't you: I will lift up mine eyes . . . from whence cometh my help.

And when I placed the glass on the table and those eyelids closed in fleeting rest, I couldn't, not that I wanted to, close out the verse which has as its gist: If you know how to give good things to your children, how much more your Heavenly Father. . .

For days I had asked God for His presence and strength to be ours during this hard time, and there it was plain as day. I looked up, and into my vicariously aching throat and onto my sympathetically dry lips He gave to me drops of the still waters beside which He was leading me.

Coping With Change

By Bill Duncan

Psalms 137:1-6; Jeremiah 29
In Marc Connelly's play, Green Pastures, the angel Gabriel is speaking to God about all the frustrating things that are happening. Here is how he phrased it, "Everything nailed down is coming loose!"

Each generation tends to identify change as peculiar to its own. Change has always haunted man, and the person who cannot adapt to change can never adjust to life. One of the few permanent features of life is change itself.

If you want proof of how each generation fears change go back 48 centuries to the time when an Assyrian wrote the following on a clay tablet recently dug up in Turkey: "Our earth is degenerate; bribery and corruption are common; children no longer obey their parents; every man wants to write his memoirs and the end of the world is evidently approaching."

In Alvin Toffler's book, Future Shock, he describes our accelerated thrust into the future. He reminds us that the great characteristic in modern life is change, such a rapid rate of change that life keeps forcing upon us. We are dizzyingly disoriented by the premature arrival of the future which comes almost before we have had time to cope with the present. We are continually under stress and therefore, very vulnerable to the assaults of our visible and invisible enemies. To the stresses and strains of modern living Toffler, who acknowledges no debt to the New Testament, attributes much of the moral breakdown of our culture — the spreading use of drugs, the recurring outbreaks of vandalism, and undirected violence. The sick apathy of millions of Christians has come about because of the stress that the enemy has put on the Christian to knock him off balance. The formula to neutralize a strong Christian is: Put him under pressure, rush him off his feet, distract him with details, hit him with stress, knock him off balance.

Our Bible passage in Psalms 137:1-4 and Jeremiah 29 shows us some ways the people of God were able to cope with change in a most undesirable situation. If there is any one thing that could be said about Judah and Israel is that they were always changing. The geographical situation of Israel placed them under the attack of every major power of history. Their land was the strategic point on every conquest.

The Psalmist described the exile experience in Psalms 137 as he sat beside the river and remembered his home land. He longed for the good old days. He remembered how it used to be and wept. He had his musical instrument but he could not sing and cry at the same time. Some of the people literally wallowed in their misery as they contemplated the hopelessness of their desperate situation.

Jeremiah wrote the letter of Jeremiah 29 to encourage and instruct those in the far off country to make the most of a bad situation. Life had to go on in spite of change and disappointment. Therefore, Jeremiah instructed the people to make roots, build houses, and have a normal family life. However, the prophet held before the people the hope that after 70 years they would return to their home land. Many of those reading the letter would die before that time but their children would enjoy the bright promises of God. There would be a restoration, a return from the land of captivity.

Wishing it not to be will not drive the problems away or change the circumstances. Realistic faith sees the problems but remembers the promises of God in order that the believer may cope with life. Very often we see people who allow the circumstances of life to get them down. Christ allows us to enjoy the blessed life that enables a person to live above the circumstances.

I Can't

By Joe Anderson, Pastor, McAdams Church, McAdams
Exodus 3:10 - 4:17

Most of our churches have either selected or are in the process of selecting those who will fill positions for the year 1976-1977. Many of you who have served faithfully on the nominating committee have heard excuse after excuse. To those of you who offered the excuses, I invite your attention to this selection of scripture and also to the results. When God called Moses, he offered four excuses as to why he couldn't serve.

In verse 11, his first excuse was that he wasn't big enough for the job. He was only a shepherd, and Pharaoh was the most powerful man on earth. To this excuse God answered, "I will be with you." The most powerful man on earth can't stand against God.

In verse 13, his second excuse was that the people would want to know who sent him. By what authority would he speak? To this God answered, "I Am that I Am has sent you." The God of eternity, the covenant God has sent you. God still reveals himself to Christians as their authority.

In chapter four, verse one, the third excuse was offered: "They won't believe me." To this, God answered by giving him signs of his sender. God will give believability to your service even though your efforts may not always be successful.

In verse ten of chapter four, the fourth excuse was offered: "I am not eloquent." To this God answered, "I made your mouth and I will put the words there." We often find ourselves speechless, but when we rely on God, he puts the words there. Often the best speech is no speech at all. In this case, God has some definite things for Moses to say.

In verses twelve through seventeen, Moses rejected the call of God to service so God sent his brother Aaron with him to be his spokesman. The tragedy of this is that Aaron led the people into idolatry when they were in the wilderness (chapter 32).

What catastrophies will God's people have to endure because of our excuses for not ministering?

Pastor Preaches At Oil Rig 100 Miles Out In The Gulf

By Mrs. A. B. McCraw
The Rev. James E. Walker, pastor of Calvary Church, Columbia, recently was invited by Shell Oil Company, to visit their operations off shore, some one hundred miles south of New Orleans, and hold a religious service.

Driving to New Orleans, Mr. Walker was met by an employee of the company, where they boarded a plane, flying out over the marshes and river area of the off shore field in the Gulf. Upon arrival he was met by Tim Buckley, Columbian, an employee of the company, who took him by boat over the vast operation.

After returning to the living quarters of the men, where a meal was served, he with the employees, including those off duty, in charge of operations and others with minor work, gathered in one of the rooms for the special program.

After a period of singing and prayer, Mr. Walker delivered his message, and at the conclusion, six men made definite commitments.

This type special religious activity is relatively new, but growing interest has been expressed in it. It is believed these experiences help to build a better working relationship, and contribute to greater production and service. The pastor says that he feels this was one of the great experiences of his life, and that he rejoices over the spirit that was evident among the people.

Spending the night in the living quarters of the officials off shore, he was flown back to New Orleans the next morning.

Since the trip, Walker has received special commendation and appreciation from the oil company for the services rendered their employees, by the type program given.

Almost every physician has his favorite disease.

Initiative is doing the right thing without being told.

Late Pastor's Children Meet At Dumas

Nine of the ten children of the late Rev. and Mrs. Marion Hill of Dumas got together on August 8 for a reunion. Eight of the ten are members of the Dumas Baptist Church. It is unusual for a family of this size, with families now of their own, to settle in the same community. Front row, l to r: John Hill, deacon; Arnold Hill,

Mrs. Agnes Brock, and Mrs. Virginia Bullock. Back row: Ellis Hill, deacon; Mrs. Lilian Hall, Jack Hill, resident of Ripley and member of First Baptist, Ripley; Earl Hill, and Miss Nona Hill. ## Immanuel, Magnolia Celebrates Pastor Gehring's 80th Birthday

Sunday, June 6, the members of the Immanuel Church, Magnolia, held their homecoming in connection with a celebration of the 80th birthday of their pastor, the Rev. Francis Gehring. Gehring came to Magnolia in 1952 and has served faithfully throughout the years. The assistant pastor is the Rev. Davis Berryhill.

After morning worship services the congregation moved to the Magnolia Community Center where a feast awaited. At the head of the table which was in the shape of a "T" was a chair reserved for the Rev. Gehring. The chair was covered in white with pink roses. On the table in front of the Rev. Gehring's place was a cake baked by Mrs. Gillis Windham, in the shape of a cross while at his left was an American Flag Cake, a gift of the church.

Mrs. Windham, church hostess, assisted by her husband, had created a unique scene of the present and former church, all laid out on green grass. The tiny older building represented the first church and a miniature exact replica of the new Immanuel Baptist Church. A tiny tree was placed in the arrangement and represented the tree which still stands after 24 years. Placed in the center was a tiny white cup holding paper and matches which reminded the church members of the burning of the note when the new church paid off its debt. There were even two miniature weeds that represented the field of tall grasses on the church lot when the church was first built. In the front and center was a Bible surrounded by yellow roses. Over 100 persons attended the fellowship.

Harrisburg, Tupelo, To Sponsor Puppet Seminar September 8

A seminar on the use of professional-quality puppets as effective learning tools will be held at Harrisburg Church, Tupelo, on Wednesday, September 8, from 6:30 - 10 p.m.

The three and one-half hour training session will be conducted by professionals from Puppet Productions, Inc., (PPI), a San Diego, California firm which trained over 10,000 persons in nationwide seminars last year.

Video tape and film segments, and live demonstrations will provide firsthand visual lessons on the production of professional-quality puppet shows.

The universal appeal of puppets is also reflected in the thousands of churches which have begun using puppets in their education programs.

"Puppets create an excellent climate for learning, whether the subject matter is secular or religious," said Bill Hawes, President of PPI. "The seminar is designed to aid both beginners and experienced puppeteers in using this valuable tool."

Seminar sizes are limited to insure adequate personal attention so early registration is recommended. Individual registration fees are $10 with reduced rates for groups available. Harrisburg Church is located at 1805 W. Main Street. For additional information, contact Sue McAllister at (601) 842-0017.

Russ: Oh, I just went outside and there it was!

A young man was receiving some hardheaded advice from an uncle, who declared: "Yes, Tommy, fools are certain; wise men hesitate." "Are you sure, Uncle John?" Tommy asked. The uncle replied, "Yes, my boy; certain of it."
